It may sound like a cliché, but Triumph's Rocket III Roadster truly is a unique motorcycle with massive presence and a legendary powerplant.

With its 2,294cc three-cylinder engine, the Rocket III Roadster is home to the world's largest production motorcycle engine. Delivering a 163 lb-ft. wallop of torque at just 2750rpm, the Rocket III Roadster delivers a riding experience unmatched by anything else on two wheels.

Although it is featured in Triumph's Cruiser range, the Rocket III Roadster transcends genres. With its midmounted pegs and relatively upright riding position, the Roadster takes on a streetfighter stance and delivers an attitude-laden ride that all motorcyclists should experience at least once in their two-wheeled career. Shrinking violets need not apply.

The ergonomics ensure that the Roadster delivers a completely different riding experience from any other Rocket IIIs – one that is easier to hustle through the corners. With a plush seat for both rider and passenger, and comfortable and controllable rear suspension, the Rocket III Roadster is capable of covering long distances with aplomb.

As you would expect from a flagship model, the Rocket III Roadster comes highly equipped, with comprehensive instrumentation – including fuel gauge, gear selection indicator and clock – 43mm upside-down front forks, adjustable rear suspension, low-maintenance shaft drive and sophisticated anti-lock brakes as standard.

Up front, the Rocket III Roadster sports Triumph's trademark twin headlights to make this imposing motorcycle even more striking, while the components carefully balance black and chrome to create an aggressive, stripped down look.

The Rocket III Roadster also comes with special color options. In addition to the popular metallic Phantom Black, it comes in two flamboyant color schemes: Phantom Red Haze and Phantom Blue Haze. These are hand-painted in Triumph's Hinckley factory and contain high sparkle content which creates an impression of incredible depth in sunlight, transforming from near black to a vibrant red or blue.
